	2. The factory has 15,000 employees working in two shifts, eight hours a day, six days a week. 30 percent of the employees are women, who in many cases supervise men. It was explained that employees are not dismissed, but are merely helped to become better workers. Skilled workers earn between 1,600 and 2,000 rubles per month, and women obtain the same wages as men for the same jobs. The salary of the director of the factory is 4,000 rubles per month, and he is provided with a large, chauffeur-driven car and living quarters. An incentive scheme is in operation, under which payments are made as individual bonuses for output. In addition, there is a long-service award up to a maximum of 50 percent for ten years' service. The factory provides evening schools to train apprentices. 3,000 young workers are learning in these schools, and 500 young workers are being trained in special technical schools.
